Synopsis

To travel to Rajasthan is to leave behind the world of commotion and confusion, of gloomy gray concrete, and forget the sometimes callous modern customs of the West. In Rajasthan one encounters marvel after marvel; one is surprised by beauty in all its forms—real or imaginary—and enchantment at every turn. A travel journal composed by four hands, this photographic opus expresses the sublime beauty of the people, nature, and places of this legendary region of India, capturing the idealized Western dream of the Orient.

Traveler, writer, and artist Laure Vernier focuses her work on the cross-cultural exchange between East and West. Gardeâs literary collaborator, Vernierâre writes the texts for Gardeâs photographic works. Together they have produced two previous travel journals: Japan Express (Le Seuil, 2003) and Pondicherry Masala (Le Seuil-Le Thâfâ des crivains, 2004). Vernierâre also creates multimedia artworks combining Polaroids, visual poems, collages, repurposed objects, and paintings, which she exhibits in France and abroad.

An outstanding hardcover coffee table book on Rajasthan. Maybe one of the best pictorial hard cover coffee table books i've seen. It stands out on as well given its super wide binding with the words RAJASTHAN. Truly amazing photography of the region is stunning. I'm a bit of a collector of hardcover books on India. This was one i hadn't seen and is of the highest quality. Well worth the price. This combined with INDIA from Eric Meola were the 1-2 punch i was looking for.

I recently purchased this book with the hope that it will remind me those magical places I visited in Rajasthan, however, I was disappointed with the quality of its pictures, writing, and the paper. It really doesn't do any justice to what Rajasthan is all about. Beyond a few nice pictures and a small percentage of writing it doesn't display the majesty of Rajasthan. I will likely donate this book to a library.

This copy also came warped so I have to keep a heavy book on top of it. The beauty of its cover is not seen.
