In The Wake Of The Dhow: The Arabian Gulf And Oman

Synopsis

The Arabian dhow, with its characteristic features, is one of the most evocative images of the Arabian Gulf, the Red Sea, and the Indian Ocean. The great cargo dhows represented a flourishing trade which stretched from the Mediterranean to China, in the time of the Portuguese and the Dutch from the 16th to the 18th centuries. When the pearling industry was at its height in the 19th and early 20th centuries, hundreds of pearling dhows were actively employed, carrying thousands of seamen diving for the finest pearls - a commodity much sought by the Western powers. In times of war, the dhows were magnificent fighting vessels and were associated with piracy that was so prevalent in these waters. Now in paperback, this book documents the dhow as an important element in the prosperity of the area before the discovery of oil. The book gives the geographical conditions and the historical/linguistical background of each dhow-type, the life-pattern in its role as cargo, pearl-diving, pirate and slaving vessels, and how the seafaring communities interacted with the dhow world.

'This book will undoubtedly become the standard text which everyone interested in Arab craft will have to consult.' William Donaldson, Department of Arabic and Islamic Studies, University of Edinburgh
'With his marvellously and deftly researched book, Agius has made a very significant contribution to filling in some of those gaps in our knowledge of medieval and post-medieval Arab seafaring, ship design and construction methodology.' Tom Vosmer, Department of Maritime Archaeology, Western Australian Maritime Museum, Fremantle
'Agius' long awaited study A... completely analyses the forces that influenced the building and the shape of the Arabian boats' Joseph Muscat, Sunday Times' Agius' book, with its collection of oral testimony enriching his glossary with new linguistic material, is an impressive achievement enhanced by the lucid and pleasing manner in which he writes.' James Taylor, British Yemeni Society Journal '[Agius] has responded, in the wake of a number of Arab chroniclers of the dhow, by supplementing a scrupulous trawl of almost the entire corpus of useful written material with observations and anecdotes meticulously gathered from a number of surviving Arab shipwrights and seafarers, compressing a wealth of detail from a wide range of sources between the covers of a single, elegantly presented book and making material of Arabic origin available to readers unacquainted with the language A...
