Google maps just does not do justice to this 90 mile wide county that is Los Angeles. It's a fat heavy spiral bound book but it's a big, big city. The one weakness is, it should have a one page freeway map somewhere. Bad that the spiral splits the two page freeway map in the most important intersections.

IN the day and age of GPS what does anybody need a map book for? I do. I like to anticipate where and how I;m going to get to my destination.

Even with GPS I use this guide frequently. I especially like the new, larger size making the small print easier to read.

Better than GPS.

Useful in combination with Mapquest and other online maps.

Thomas guide is a great map book - the best

GPS probably makes this obsolete, but if you want printed maps, here they are. Persons with failing vision might need extra light or a magnifying glass, and don't plan on using this in a moving car -- the type is small. If you want to color highlight streets or use sticky notes while (for example) househunting, this is way better than a computer screen, obviously.

very good product & service
