Customer Reviews

Renowned retina specialist and ophthalmologist, works with patients at both ends of the life span - infants born with retinopathy of prematurity, and elders who suffer from age-related macular degeneration.

This is an absolute "must read" for anyone with an "Age Related Macular Degeneration" diagnosis. It gives the basics of what everyone needs to know to develop an attitude and the tools for survival. I read the first edition 8 years ago (and I am surviving) and was pleased to see the author has updated as the treatments and research continue to find new information. In my opinion, retinal specialists should be handing this to their patients when they give them an ARMD diagnosis. Dr. Samuel makes it clear that this is a condition you can live with but emphasizes that you may have to make adjustments in your life that will help you to lead a normal life. I have given several copies to friends to aid them in their journey.

This is one of the best, most complete, and concise books on the subject, a "must buy" for anyone affected by macular degeneration and for caregivers. It clearly explains all aspects of this condition and includes a very complete diet regimen of all the healthy foods and those to avoid. This book belongs in everyone's hands who is in some way affected by this condition that currently affects 11 million Americans and 30 million people worldwide.

Excellent and readable book covering all aspects of macular degeneration and how to fight it. Highly recommended.
