A Home In Tibet

Synopsis

When her mother dies in a car accident along a great highway in india, far from her country and her family, tsering decides to take a handful of her ashes to tibet. She arrives at the foothills of her mother's ancestral home in a nomadic village in east tibet to realize that she had been preparing for this homecoming all her life. Everything is familiar to her, especially the flowers of the tibetan summer. She understands then the gift her mother had bequeathed her: the love of a land. A home in tibet is a daughter's haunting tribute to a mother and a homeland. A story about the love between a mother and a daughter who only had each other as family and refuge, it gestures to the journeys made by those exiled from their lands, and the dreams of daughters.

This author is one of my favorite poets! This is a great memoir that I will not forget.

I have read many scholarly works on Tibet and I have to say that I learned more from your book than all of them combined. So many passages had me laughing out loud or with tears in my eyes. Thank you Tsering for sharing your family with us.

It was my husband who read it. He hasn't finished it yet, but he said that everything about it was a "five." He said he liked the subtle nuanced descriptions of Tibet.

The author really is a poet. Her writing is luminous. This memoir tells the story of the disconnect between Tibetan diaspora and those inside better than anything I've read.

A beautiful story about the mother-daughter bond and the relationship to motherland. Written in poetic prose, Dhompa's memoir is not only her personal story of "love, loss, and belonging" but also the story of Tibet.
